CZĘŚĆ I — READING

Imagine that you have been offered an excellent job in another country. If you accept the offer, you will have to move away from your family and friends. If you refuse it, you may regret the decision later.

If I were in this situation, I would consider the long-term consequences carefully. I would accept the position provided that the salary and working conditions were satisfactory. I would also make sure that I could return home regularly.

Had I received such an offer several years ago, I might have accepted it immediately. However, my priorities are different now. If I had made certain choices in the past, I might be living abroad today.

Moving abroad is not necessarily the right decision for everyone. Even if an opportunity looks perfect, it can create unexpected problems. If it weren't for strong family relationships, some people might find the decision easier.

Ultimately, there is no perfect answer. You have to decide what matters most to you and accept that every choice has consequences.
