CZĘŚĆ H — READING

The future of the project remains uncertain. The management team has stated that it will continue with the plan provided that costs remain under control. Should the financial situation deteriorate further, however, the project may have to be postponed.

The director argues that even if some difficulties arise, the project can still succeed. Had the team anticipated the current problems earlier, it might have chosen a different approach. If the original strategy had been successful, the company would probably be in a much stronger position now.

Unless additional funding is found, several planned activities will have to be cancelled. But for the financial support provided by its partners, the project would already have been abandoned.

Management has made it clear that whether or not everyone agrees with the final decision, implementation will begin next month.
